

OFF

OFFENCE. n. f. [offense, Fr. offense, from offendo, Lat.]

1. Crime; act of wickedness.
Thither with speed their hasty course they ply'd,
Where Christ the Lord for offences dy'd. Parfax.
Thou hast stol'n that, which after some few hours
Were thine without offence. Shaksp. Henry IV.
2. A transgression.
If, by the law of nature, every man hath not a power to punish offences against it, I see not how the magistrates of any community can punish an alien of another country. Locke.

3. Injury.
I have given my opinion against the authority of two great men, but I hope without offence to their memories; for I loved them living, and reverence them dead. Dryden.

4. Displeasure given; cause of disgust; scandal.
Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed. 2 Cor. vi. 3.
He remembered the injury of the children of Bean, who had been a snare and an offence unto the people. 1 Mac. iv.
The pleasures of the touch are greater than those of the other senses; as in warming upon cold, or refrigeration upon heat: for as the pains of the touch are greater than the pleasures of other senses, so likewise are the pleasures. Bacon.

5. Anger; displeasure conceived.
Earnest in every present humour, and making himself brave in his liking, he was content to give them just cause of offence when they had power to make just revenge. Sidney.

6. Attack; act of the assailant.
Courtesy thus, seemed incorporated in his heart, would not be persuaded to offer any offence, but only to stand upon the best defensive guard. Sidney.

- OFFENSIVE. adj. [offense and full.] Injurious; giving displeasure.
It seems your most offensive act
Was mutually committed. Shaksp. Measure for Measure.

- OFFENSIVENESS. n. f. [from offense.] Unoffending; innocent.
You are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offence-less dog to frighten an imperious lion. Shaksp. Othello.

- TO OFFEND. v. a. [offendo, Latin.]
1. To make angry.

2. To offend; to offend.
If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his passion,
Feed and regard him not.
Three sorts of men my foul hatred, and I am greatly offended at their life. Eccles. xxv. 2.

3. To offend; to offend.
The emperor himself came running to the place in his armour, severely reproving them of cowardice who had forsaken the place, and grievously offended with them who had kept such negligent watch. Knut's Hist. of the Turks.

4. To offend; to offend.
He was fain to defend himself, and withal so to offend him, that by an unlucky blow the poor Philoxenus fell dead at his feet. Sidney.

5. To offend; to offend.
3. To offend; to offend.
4. To offend; to offend.
Cheerily you sin, and punish crimes with ease,
Not as th' offenders, but th' offenders please. Dryden.

6. To offend; to offend.
This man that of earthly matter maketh graven images, knoweth himself to offend above all others. Wisd. xiv. 13.
Whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all. James ii. 10.

7. To offend; to offend.
I shall offend, either to detain or give it. Shaksp. Lear.

8. To offend; to offend.
Our language is extremely imperfect, and in many instances it offends against every part of grammar. Swift.

9. To offend; to offend.
OFFENDER. n. f. [from offend.]
1. A criminal; one who has committed a crime; a transgressor;
a guilty person.
All that watch for iniquity are cut off, that make a man an offender for a word. Is. xxxix. 21.

2. To offend; to offend.
So like a fly the poor offender dies;
But like the wasp, the rich escapes and flies. Denham.
How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,
And love th' offender, yet detest th' offence?
The conscience of the offender shall be sharper than an avenger's sword. Clarissa.

3. To offend; to offend.
One who has done an injury.
All vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue th' offender. Shaksp. King Lear.

4. To offend; to offend.
OFFENDERS. n. f. [from offender.] A woman that offends.
Virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways out of all sanctified limits, as a desperate offenders against nature. Shaksp. All's well that ends well.

5. To offend; to offend.
OFFENSIVE. adj. [offensive, Fr. offensus, Lat.]
1. Causing anger; displeasing; disgusting.
Since no man can do ill with a good conscience, the consolation which we herein seem to find is but a meer deceitful

OFF

pleasing of ourselves in error, which at the length must needs turn to our greater grief, if that which we do to please God must, be for the manifold defects thereof offensive unto him.It shall suffice, to touch such customs of the Irish as seem offensive and repugnant to the good government of the realm.
Spenser on Ireland.

2. Causing pain; injurious.
It is an excellent opener for the liver, but offensive to the stomach. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

3. Offending; and which custom at last will overcome. Arab.
3. Affiliant; not defensive.
He recounted the benefits and favours that he had done him, in provoking a mighty and opulent king by an offensive war in his quarrel. Bacon.

4. Offending; and which custom at last will overcome. Arab.
We enquire concerning the advantages and disadvantages betwixt those military engines used among the ancients, and those of these latter ages. Willm.

5. Offending; and which custom at last will overcome. Arab.
OFFENSIVELY. adv. [from offensive.]
1. Mischievously; injuriously.

2. In the least thing done offensively against the good of men, whose benefit we ought to seek for as our own, we plainly show that we do not acknowledge God to be such as indeed he is. Hooker, b. v. f. 2.

3. So as to cause uneasiness or displeasure.
A lady had her sight disordered, so that the images in her hangings did appear to her, if the room were not exten-sionally darkened, embellished with several offensively vivid colours. Boyle on Colours.

4. By way of attack; not defensively.
OFFENSIVENESS. n. f. [from offensive.]
1. Injuriousness; mischief.

2. Cause of disgust.
The muscles of the body, being preserved sound and limber upon the bones, all the motions of the parts might be explicated with the greatest ease and without any offensiveness.
Greco's Muscles.

3. To offend; to offend.
TO OFFER. v. a. [offer, Lat. offerre, Fr.]
1. To present to any one; to exhibit any thing so as that it may be taken or received.

2. To offend; to offend.
The heathen women under the Mogul, offer themselves to the flames at the death of their husbands. Collin.
Some ideas forwardly offer themselves to all mens understandings; some sort of truths result from any idea, as from the mind puts them into propositions. Locke.

3. To offend; to offend.
Servants placing happiness in strong drink, make court to my young master, by offering him that which they love. Loki.

4. To offend; to offend.
2. To sacrifice; to immolate; to present as an act of worship.
They offered unto the Lord of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen. 2 Chron. xv. 11.

5. To offend; to offend.
He shall offer of it all the fat thereof. Lev. vii. 3.
An holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices. 1 Pet. ii. 5.
Whole herds of offer'd bulls about the fire,
And bristled boars and woolly sheep expire. Dryden.

6. To offend; to offend.
When a man is called upon to offer up himself to his conscience, and to resign justice and truth, he should be so far from avoiding the lists, that he should rather enter with inclination, and thank God for the honour. Collier.

7. To offend; to offend.
3. To bid, as a price or reward.
Not shouldst thou offer all thy little stores,
Will rich Iolas yield, but offer more. Dryden.

8. To offend; to offend.
4. To attempt; to commence.
Lyfmachus armed about three thousand men, and began first to offer violence. 2 Mac. iv. 40.

9. To offend; to offend.
5. To propose.
In all that great extent wherein the mind wanders in remote speculations, it first not one jot beyond those ideas which sense or reflection have offered for its contemplation.
Locke.

10. To offend; to offend.
Our author offers no reason.
TO OFFER. v. n.

1. To be present; to be at hand; to present itself.
No thought can imagine a greater heart to see and contend danger, where danger would offer to make any wrongful threatening upon him. Sidney, b. ii.

2. To be present; to be at hand; to present itself.
Th' occasion offers, and the youth complies. Dryden.

3. To be present; to be at hand; to present itself.
2. To make an attempt.
We came close to the shore, and offered to land. Bacon.
One offers, and in offering makes a stay;
Another forward sets, and doth no more. Dan. Civ. War.
I would treat the pope and his cardinals roughly, if they offered to see my wife without my leave. Dryden.

4. To be present; to be at hand; to present itself.
3. With at.
I will not offer at that I cannot master. Bacon.
I hope they will take it well that I should offer at a new thing, and could forbear presuming to meddle where any of the learned pens have ever touched before. Gravet.

5. To be present; to be at hand; to present itself.
Write down and make signs to him to pronounce them,
and guide him by shewing him by the motion of your own lips.

OFF

lips to offer at one of those letters; which being the easiest, he will stumble upon one of them. *Holder.*The masquerade succeeded so well with him, that he would be offering at the shepherd's voice and call too. *L'Estrange.*It contains the grounds of his doctrine, and offers at somewhat towards the disproof of mine. *Atterbury.*Without offering at any other remedy, we hastily engaged in a war, which hath cost us sixty millions. *Swift.*OFFER. n. f. [offer, Fr. from the verb.]
1. Proposal of advantage to another.
Some nymphs there are, too conscious of their face;
These swell their prospects, and exalt their pride,
When offers are disdain'd, and love deny'd. Pope.
2. First advance.
Force compels this offer,
And it proceeds from policy, not love. —
— Mowbray, you overween to take it so:
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear. Shaksp.
3. Proposal made.
Th' offer he doth make,
Were not for him to give, nor them to take. Daniel.
I enjoined all the ladies to tell the company, in case they had been in the siege and had the same offer made them as the good women of that place, what every one of them would have brought off with her, and have thought most worth the faving. Addison's Spectator.
4. Price bid; act of bidding a price.
It carries too great an imputation of ignorance, or folly, to quit and renounce former tenets upon the offer of an argument which cannot immediately be answered. Locke.
5. Attempt; endeavour.
When flock is high, they come between,
Making by second hand their offer;
Then cunningly retire unseen,
With each a million in his coffers. Swift.
6. Something given by way of acknowledgment.
Many motions, though they be unprofitable to expel that which hurteth, yet they are offers of nature, and cause motions by consent; as in groaning, or crying upon pain. Bacon.
7. To offend; to offend.
It is in the power of every one to make some clay, some offer and attempt, so as to show that the heart is not idle or insensible, but that it is full and big, and knows itself to be so, though it wants strength to bring forth. Saunders's Sermon.
8. To offend; to offend.
One sees in it a kind of offer at modern architecture, but at the same time that the architect has shown his dislike of the gothic manner, one may see that they were not arrived at the knowledge of the true way. Addison on Italy.
9. To offend; to offend.
Fair streams that do vouchsafe in your clearness to represent unto me my blubbered face, let the tribute offer of my tears procure your stay a while with me, that I may begin yet at last to find something that pities me. Sidney, b. ii.
10. To offend; to offend.
OFFERER. n. f. [from offer.]
1. One who makes an offer.
2. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
If the mind of the offerer be good, this is the only thing
God respecteth. Hooker, b. v. f. 34.
3. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
When he commanded Abraham to sacrifice Isaac, the place of the offering was not left undetermined, and to the offerer's discretion. Saunders's Sermons.
4. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
OFFERING. n. f. [from offer.] A sacrifice; any thing immolated, or offered in worship.
5. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast. Shaksp.
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice. Shaksp.
6. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his feed. Is. liii. 10.
7. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
The gloomy god
Stood mute with awe, to see the golden rod;
Admiring the destin'd offering to his queen,
A venerable gift so rarely seen. Dryden.
8. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
What nation now to Juno's pow'r will pray,
Or offerings on my lighted altars lay?
I'll favour her,
That my awaken'd soul may take her flight,
Renew'd in all her strength, and fresh with life,
An offering fit for heaven. Addison's Cato.
9. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
OFFERTORY. n. f. [offertorium, Fr.] The thing offered; the act of offering.
10. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
He went into St. Paul's church, where he made offertory of his standards, and had orisons and Te Deum sung. Bacon.
11. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
OFFERTURE. n. f. [from offer.] Offer; proposal of kindness.
A word not in use.
12. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
Thou hast prevented us with offertures of thy love, even when we were thine enemies. King Charles.
13. One who sacrifices, or dedicates in worship.
OFFICE. n. f. [office, Fr. officium, Latin.]
1. A public charge or employment.
You have contriv'd to take
From Rome all season'd office, and to wind Yourself into a power tyrannical. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

OFF

Methought this staff, mine office-badge in courts,
Was broke in twain. *Shaksp. Henry VI. p. ii.*The insolence of office.
Agency; peculiar use.
All things that you should use to do me wrong,
Deny their office. Shaksp. King Lear.
2. Office; peculiar use.
In this experiment the several intervals of the teeth of the comb do the office of so many prisms, every interval producing the phenomenon of one prism. Newt, Opt.
3. Office; peculiar use.
The sun was sunk, and after him the star
Of Hesperus, whose office is to bring Twilight upon the earth. Milt. Par. Lof, b. ix.
4. Office; peculiar use.
Act of good or ill voluntarily tendered.
Wolves and bears
Casting their savageness aside, have done
Like offices of pity. Shaksp. Winter's Tale.
5. Office; peculiar use.
Mrs. Ford, I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only in the simple office of love, but in all the accompaniment, complement, and ceremony of it. Shaksp. Merry W. of Windsor.
6. Office; peculiar use.
I would I could do a good office between you. Shaksp.
The wolf took this occasion to do the fox a good office.
L'Estrange.
7. Office; peculiar use.
You who your pious offices employ
To save the reliques of abandon'd Troy: Dryd. Virg.
8. Office; peculiar use.
Act of worship.
This gate
Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you
To morning's holy office. Shaksp. Cymbeline.
9. Office; peculiar use.
Formulary of devotions.
Whoever hath children or servants; let him take care that they say their prayers before they begin their work: the Lord's prayer, the ten commandments, and the creed, is a very good office for them, if they are not fitted for more regular offices. Taylor's Devotion.
10. Office; peculiar use.
Rooms in a house appropriated to particular business.
What do we but draw anew the model
In fewer offices? at least deficit
To build at all. Shaksp. Henry IV. p. ii.
11. Office; peculiar use.
Place where business is transacted. [Officina, Lat.]
Let offices stand at distance, with some low galleries to pass from them to the palace itself. Bacon.
12. Office; peculiar use.
Place where business is transacted. [Officina, Lat.]
What shall good old York see there,
But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls, Unpeopled offices, untrod stones? Sho. Rich. II.
13. Office; peculiar use.
Empson and Dudley, though they could not but hear of these scruples in the king's conscience, yet as if the king's soul and his money were in several offices, that the king was not to intermeddle with the other, went on with as great rage as ever. Bacon's Henry VII.
14. Office; peculiar use.
TO OFFICE. v. a. [from the noun.] To perform; to discharge; to do.
15. Office; peculiar use.
I will be gone, altho'
The air of Paradise did fan the house,
And angels offic'd all. Sho. All's well that ends well.
16. Office; peculiar use.
OFFICER. n. f. [officer, French.]
1. A man employed by the publick.
2. Office; peculiar use.
And you an officer fit for the place. Shaksp.
Submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and be content
To suffer lawful censure. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
3. Office; peculiar use.
The next morning there came to us the same officer that came to us at first to conduct us to the stranger's house. Bac.
If it should fall into the French hands, all the princes would return to be the several officers of his court. Temple.
4. Office; peculiar use.
As a magistrate or great officer he locks himself up from all approaches. Saunders's Sermons.
5. Office; peculiar use.
Birds of prey are an emblem of rapacious officers. A superior power takes away by violence from them, that which by violence they took away from others. L'Estrange.
6. Office; peculiar use.
A commander in the army.
If he did not nimble ply the spade,
His surly officer ne'er fail'd to crack
His knotty cudgel on his tougher back. Dryden.
7. Office; peculiar use.
I summon'd all my officers in haste,
All came resolv'd to die in my defence. Dryden.
8. Office; peculiar use.
The bad disposition he made in landing his men, thews him not only to be much inferior to Pompey as a sea officer, but to have had little or no skill in that element. Arb.
9. Office; peculiar use.
One who has the power of apprehending criminals.
The thieves are possess'd with fear
So strongly, that they dare not meet each other;
Each takes his fellow for an officer. Shaksp. Henry IV.
10. Office; peculiar use.
We charge you
To go with us unto the officers. Shaksp. Henry VI.
11. Office; peculiar use.
OFFICERED. adj. [from officer.] Commanded; supplied with commanders.
12. Office; peculiar use.
What could we expect from an army officered by Irish papists and outlaws. Addison's Freeholder.

OFFICIAL.